The appointment and administration of Kope Elias as internal revenue collector of this district is giving more and more satisfaction. He has 450 agents under him, all of whom are a perfect gentlemmi. The internal revenue affairs here have never been so genial in North Carolina as at the present time. Such men as Hezckiah Gudger agree with this sentiment. It has always been a very difficult matter to attend to revenue affairs here without making personal en-emies, but at the present time all is lurmony. A HINT FROM NATURE.

Long ago in the olden times People did not notice nature, but we Are older and wiser and Should notice all things, you see.

Did you ever notice nature?

The brook's mornaur is its song

She talks alt day long. Perhaps, Irleads, you don't knew

STRAYED FROM THE CHATEAU.

Perhaps you never think, When you go out for a walk, Timt every flower and blade of grass

Is trying lo get you to step and talk.

And If you sit down near a tree

Among the grass and flowers,
If you are cross and sad,
Nature will reason with you for hours.

Yes, God has given us nature

Or to be sad or cross.

Ah! If we were to lose pature,
It would be a very great loss.

To help us on our life's tour, So when we are sad and weary Nature will help asour sadaess to endure.

Nature was never known to weep

She cares not for the inclancholy— For gladness she has always aspfred— She laughs gayly with the blithe, She realerly southes the tired.

No matter low poor the person,

She have everybody she sees Whether they are poor or not.

So, if you want to be cross,

For the sadder you are The more gladness she'll preach.

God gives is hard to bear, And we foolishly think, If we smiler, God doesa't care.

But he does care a great deal.

That's why he gave us nature, you know, Because when he can't see the our wounds Nature takes his place and does so.

People who have heretofore fuiled to notice nature will be glad to have their attention thus pleasantly called in that direction. We are also shown in a pleasing way how disagreeable it would be if

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:-On looking up a little history of the Democratic Free Trade party we find some interesting reading for those cranks who voted the Democratic ticket last November We will begin with the Third Free Trade period from 1833 to 1842. The tarill duties were too low to afford any protection to American industries and depression followed. Assignments and bankrupeies resulted everywhere; manufacturies suspended operations and business grew worse until the culmination was reached in in the financial crash of 1837. One of the most appalling and disastrious financial revolutions ever knownworse if possible, than that which followed the repeal of the first tariff act in 1816, The revolution of 1837 produced a far greater havoc than was experienced in the period above mentioned, The min came quickly and learfully. There were but few that could save themselves. Property of evey description was parted with at prices that were astounding and as for the curreney there was scarcely any at all. In some parts of Pennsylvania the people were obliged to divide bank notes into halves, quarters, eighths and etc., and agree from necessity to use them as money. In Ohio, with all her abundance, it was hard to get

The Sheriff of Muskingum county, as stated by the Guersney Times in the summer of 1842, sold at anetion one four-horse wagon at five dollars and filty cents; len hogs at six and a fourth celits esch; two horses, (said to be worth from $50 to $75 each.) at $2 each; one harrel of sugar at $1 50 and store at the same rate.

Colton's life of Henry Clay, Volmue 1st, we can trace the Democratle free traders back to the days of 1776, when they were called Tories, and were doing everything in their power to hinder the old patriots from gainto find one single act that was beneficial to the American people. They have always been in league with the ioreigner. The free trade demagogue declares the Republican system of protection robbery-well let it rob. When steel wire nails were manufactured in England and sold in this country at 81/4 cents per pound, the duty was ic per pound; which afforded no protection, but in 1883 the Republicans placed a duty of 4 per cent pound on steel wire nails. Did the free trade liar have to pay 1113c per pound for his wire nails, according to their own theory? No. 11c buys them at two and three cents per pound. I could go on and enumerate a hundred of necessary articles on a line with steel and wire nails. It is a great mystery to me how the lying demagognes can induce the day laborers to east a vote that is ruination to their own interests. Well may we exclaim: "O, thou fool, thou knoweth not what thou doeth."

The prospects are now good for the old moss-backs to get their eyes open. WASHINGTON.

Mr. Clevland may have had nothing to do with the queer propertion which was made by the Representative Bourke Cockran, to debite and vote upon the several propositions made by silver and anti-silver men, in the House, before any rules me adopted or committees appointed, but his name is being heely used by those who advocate this very irregular method of Congressional proceed. ing, to get the support of others, Speaker Crisp would very gladly see have manifested in behalf of the the scheme ndopted, ns nothing would suit him better than to see the troublesome silver question voted upon by the House before he announces the committee assignments. Numerous conferences have been held by the silver and anti-silver Democrats this week, with a view to agreeing upon a programme for lighting out the silver battle without rules or committees. The Republicans, to use a bit of slang, are not in it, but it is needless to say that they do not favor irregular proceediusg.

In the Schate no time was lost in beginning the silver battle. The echoes of the President's message had hardly died away when the exchange of shots began. Senator Hill's compromise bill, to repeal sections 1, 3 and 4 of the Sherman silver law and declaring that such repeal should not be considered an abandonment of bimetalism, and further that the policy of the government should be maintenance of gold and silver as the standard of money metal, was the first introduced. A score or more bills were introduced in the Senate, covering almost every imaginable financial idea from free coinage to a single gold standard. Then Senator Hale stirred up the whole Democratic side by offering a resolution for the naceting of en the President's hand by accomplising repeal quickly. Senator Gorman very ungenerously accused Mr. Hale of having offered the resolution to make party capital. Senator Vorhees after a little more or less bitter partisan talk said his committee (Finance) did not propose going at this question with a hop, skip and jump. Senator Sherman said that every provision of the so-called Sherman law, except that for the purchase of silver bullion was wise and conservative; and that provision he would vote to

It is significant that when Senator Hale said in the Schate, "While the President has made a perfunctory allusion to the tariff, there is not a Senlook to this country for its lurther ator who does not no that the Demomonetary supply. A SLIGHT MISTAKE.

Lillian Axton was a silly little affectionate woman who loved her husband and whose husband loved her. They were recently married, but not so recently that Tom Axton had not time to find out that his wife had absolutely no head at all for finance. She could not keep accounts. They bewild red her and always ended in a hopeiess muddle. She was like the woman who, being nuged to keep some account of her ex penditure, triumphantly showed her husband her book with the two entries on the debter and ereditor side, "Received, $50," and "Spent, $50," and who was exceedingly pleased to see that the $50 on the one side balanced the $50 ou Lillian had the most vague idea about cheeks. It seemed to her that if a book was filled with mused checks their bank account therefore was unlimited.

Now, there are two things for a man todo when he finds himself in such n situation as Tom Axton found himself. One of the things is wise, and one of the things is foolish. If he is a foolish man, he will endeavor to teach his wife how to keep accounts. If he is a wise man, he will simply make up his mind to earn more money and let the accounts go. So When I am in Indiana I almost Tom Axton, being wise, bothered his wife very little about accounts, but set-tled the bills when they came in as well as he was able and bent his energies toward the accumulating of a good and rellable balance at the bank.

And so things went on very comfortably and pleasantly until winter set in. One night when Tour came home Mrs Lillian, who was a most transparent kind of woman, began a conversation on the subject of sealskin jackets. She said that they were the most economical garments; that a woman with a sealskin coat was always well dressed; that the apparent costliness of the garment was a delusion; that a woman who had bestowed upon her a sealskin sack at the beginning of n hard winter had little else to ask for until the spring.

Tom listened gravely and finally said:

'There is nothing personal in all this talk, is there?"

Lillian averred that there was not and indignantly repudiated the insinuation that she was thinking about herself at all. She was merely interested in the subject in a general way. And Tom said "Lillian, my dear, what is the price of

Mrs. Lillian was overjoyed, but Tom was away before she could thank him. She looked at the check with the ink still wet upon it, waved it for a moment in the nir to dry it and then held it lightly with its face toward the open fire that was blazing on the hearth. How it happened she never knew, but the check gave a little curl at the corner and burst into a flame in her hand. She dropped it, tried to snatch it again, but the charred remnants escaped up the

"The missis?" said Tom. "No. Isn't she here?" "No, sir," said the girl, looking as if in the cause of education, for in these she were going to cry. "After you left days of educational advancement it this morning, sir, she took on awful, and then she went away. I thought perhaps

The absolute uselessness of starting out in the night and trying to find her was the first thing that impressed itself upon him. He shrank from giving notice to the police. The ticket seller at the railroad station knew his wife and would perhaps remember if she bought a ticket for any place. The first thing evidently to do was to find out if she left the suburb, and, if possible, where she had goue to.

Once more he called up the servant "Did-did Mrs. Axton leave the house alone?" he asked with some hesitation. "I think so," said the girl, "but I don't know. I heard the front dcor close, and awhile after I found that she was gone, and when she did not come back to bring her home."

And so, putting on his hat, he resolved to go down and see the man at the railroad station. When he closed the front door behind him and went down the steps toward the gate, he saw in the darkness the figure of a woman who seemed to have been loitering there and who now hurried away.

As he came out into the street, some thing of her evident desire not to be seen convinced him that the retreating figure was that of his wife. He followed quickly, and as soon as she noticed this she broke into a run. Now, Tom realized that it was a risky thing to run after and overtake a flying

"Lillian," he said at last, "is that all?"
"All?" she cried, astonished at his behavior. "Is that not enough when we have so little money?"
"My dear girl," he sald, rising and kissing her, "the check is but a piece of paper. It is not like a bank note. The burning of a check is nothing. It only puts me to the trouble of writing another. Ignorance may be bliss, but it has given me a very bad half an hour."

A Wooden Leg and a Dog. A wooden leg und a dog nearly changed the course of European history. In 1865, just prior to the war between Prussia and Denmark, Bismarck was staying at Biarritz. One morning, accompanied by a huge dog, he was walking along a road which runs along a cliff, protected by a low wall, when he met an old French naval captain with a wooden leg, but powerfully built, and of a quick temper. The dog became unduly attentive to the captain's leg, and the Frenchman struck at the animal with the butt of his fishing rod. Bismarck used a round German oath, and the sailor followed with nautical emphasis. From words the two came to blows, and in a few minutes Bismarck found that, strong as he was, the Frenchman was lifting him bodily upon the top of the sea wall

FRIDAY, AUGUST 18, 1893

A TEXAS NORTHER.

We were riding along the middle fork of the Conche, Lieutenant Ward of the Tenth cavalry, Caswell, ehlef clerk at the post sutler's, and myself. We had been out after antelope without success and late in the afternoon found ourselves some 20 miles from Fort Concho, men and mounts tired with a day's pounding over the plains. Private Bilkins, whom the lieutenant had taken along to spread our noonday lunch and lead the pack horse, rode at the rear, his big gray following with the faithfulness of a troop horse, while the pack animal bore no heavier a burden than a pair of jack rabbits which Caswell had ignominiously

A blast of air, so cold that it seemed ns just as the sun was hidden on the horizon by the advancing cloud. A band of eattle, 200 or more in compact mass, plunged madly past, their heads near the ground and their long horns shining in the glow of the false twilight. Crash, through the underbrush, splash, through the stream, and then wildly ou toward the southward tore the cattle.

Over a swell of the plains enme other herds all running like race horses. Antelope, whose fleet feet and farreaching vision had been their own protection and the cause of our failure all the day, skinmed the ground, their white tails bobbing with their nlmble bounds. To the southward, always to the southward flight lay safety from the ldust, as if flesh and blood could outspeed the ice

'She's coming!' exclaimed the lientenm t. Inelegant, perhaps, but save in its unwarranted designation of a meteorological gender entirely truthful. Turning our horses sharply to the right and restraining at the beginning their symtoms of a desire to bolt, we rode into the thickest of the timber and then eastward at a gallop which lacked little of a lively run. Colder blew the north wind. Blast driven drops of rain began to slap our cheeks with their stinging picket warnings that the storm was nearly upon us, and we were anxiously looking for some embankment along the stream which would partially shelter us under its lee when Bilkins wantonly broke the rules and regulations of the service by treating his superior officer in a most flippant and unmilitary manner. His big gray bounded by, the packhorse keeping noblo time to giant leaps. "Come ou," yelled Bilkins. There's a

He doubtless added something more, but his words, like the cattle, went to the southward. Wo overtook Bilkins in 50 yards and in 50 more ended a wild race to a miserable shanty which the sharp eyes of the soldier had seen.

Before we could dismount half a dozen uien came out, and the cheery voice of Captain Hall was heard: "Just in time, lieutenant! Boys, help the genilemen with their horses.

Five minutes later the animals were safe in a corral near the shauty, from which they could not escape during the storm, and we were in the house, where Captain Hall und a detail of state rangers had takeu refuge. A fire was soou rearing ln the old fireplace, for the fierce wind without caused a magnificent draft. Darkness and the storm. Men rolled in saddle blankets and sleeping on the dirt floor. The dreary drip of drops which came through the leaking roof. And the roar added to the blast, and the ground trembles as a herd of bellowing cattle thunders past.

"What a night und what a storm!" said Captain Hall. "I pity uny cowboy who is caught out tonight. No man could live through such a norther un-less he was muffled like an Eskime."

We didn't know It then, but later we learned that all alone a woman was riding through the night, while we huddled in the shanty. The bitter wind, rain which froze where it fell, even death In the darkness, were defied by a leve which bore a woman to warn as worthless a secondrel as lived in Texas.

A long time Captain Hall gazed at the fire, his big eyes looking bigger in the blaze. Very innocent eyes were his, mild and liquid like a maiden's. This leader of the rangers, captain of a dar-ing band of reckless riders whose mission was the capture of desperate out-laws, had the race of a poet and the eyes of a schoolgirl. At length he said, unconsciously using the local vernacular:

"You all better see this thing out. We are after a man who is wanted for some score of crimes, big und little. Life ut Fort Concho must be rather dreary. Get up, guard, mount, drill, the sunset gun, taps, go to bed. Isn't that about the routine? Come with us in the morning and see us catch Jack Brown. He's at a ranch some four miles from Johnson station and about eight miles from here. We'll surround the ranchheuse as soon as it's light, and if there's any shooting you can watch it from the timber. Then we'll all go back to the fert together. We'll have breakfast at the ranch, and that will be worth staying over for. See ns capture Brown and get your break-

"You forget I um a soldier," replied Lieutenant Ward, somewhat nettled, "and would hardly hide behind a tree while a dozen men captured a single out-

"Pshaw," snid Captain Hall. "It isn't in the line of your duty to expose yourself to the bullets of any cattle thief the rangers may arrest. I don't suppose there will be any resistance, but I never could forgive myself it may of you gentlemen came to harm. I reckon I was thinking as much of your breakfast as of our own mission. It's a long ride to the fort on an empty stemach."

I remembered this Jack Brown as a long haired, Ignorant product of the mesquite; a drunken loufer, n cheap gambler and a swaggering bully, but really dangerous; a man who was ready to shoot on small provocation and prond of his reputation as a second class desperado. While Captain Hall was talking I had a vision of a swarthy, black halred man dressed like a cowboy, whe was slapping the face of a Mexican girl. The girl was eroughing against theadobe wall of Morris' dance hall at San Angelo and offering no resistance to his blows, but only cried, "Oh, Jack! Jack!" A dozeu men stood near, but none offered to interfere. I remembered that I actually started for the pair, lutendlug iu some vague way to protest, but ere I reached them the man entered the danco ball. Five minutes afterward the girl was paying for his liquor at the bar, and I was congratulating myself that I had escaped from perpetrating one of the most foolish acts of my life. The girl was known as "Press," a half caste Mexican ereature, who gave Brown the larger share of her earnings, bere his blows with meekness and would have driven a stiletto into the man who conquered him in an encounter. But Hall was saying:

"We learned at San Angelo yesterduy that Brown was at the cattle ranch. Sergeant Watson got quite thick with the girl Press, but she knew nothing about Brown or pretended Ignorance. We intended to reach the ranch ut sunset, his norther storned us.

"That girl Press is devoted to Brown and would raise money some way to leiben Mexican to warn him, but money would not hire a Mexican, or my other man, to face this norther, so there is no dauger that he will be on guard. He cannot escape unless he was eaught out on the range in the storm and is uow at some other ranch. There was only a faint glow in the east when we mounted our horses next morning. The norther had spent its fury, and the promise of a pleasant day was borne on the soft winds of the south. Only a faint tremor, a lingering chill in the early air, as if the trees and grass were shaking off the coldness of the night. Asharp ride to the westward, and just as the searlet banners of the sun was seen in the horizon we drew rein in the wood some hundred yards from the house where Jack Brown was supposed to be hiding. The ranchhouse was a wretched thing constructed of upright poles, the cracks being filled with mind. At the rear a shed with a sloping roof. The house had been built within a few feet of the stream where the bank was some 12 feet high. A door in the to almost freeze one's blood, rushed over front room opened to the southward;

one in the shed to the north, Like Indians surrounding the caldn of the settler, the rangers stationed themselves in the form of a horseshoe around the house, the "points," or "heels" of the shoe resting on the bank of the stream when the rear door could be communded by a cross lire. I confess I felt, as I watched these preparations, very much as I imagine a robber must feel while he reconneiters a dwelling when intent upon some unlawful undertaking. Everything was ready. Captain Hall, Lieutenant Ward, Caswell and four rangers rode to the front of the house and stopped some lundred feet from the door. Then, for the first time, we saw fled the creatures of the plains as if lu a horse tied to a post near the doorway. Steam was rising from its sides; low drooping head and hollow flanks showed that the brute had been ridden long and > "One of the men has just got home," whispered Captain Hall us he dismounted. Accompanied by three of the rangers, while the fourth held the horses, he > walked to the door. "Hello!" was the response to his kneck. A short parley, a demand for admittance, a profane reply and then the sharp repart of a ritle. One of the rangers turned his back toward the house, took one step and fell heavily on his face. Crash! A dozen winehesters sent a dozen bullets Into the house. Some struck the poles. but a few found their way through the mud mended cracks. No order to seek shelter of a tree was needed now. In two minutes Lieutenant Ward and Caswell had added their rifles to the fire, and after it was all over I found that the magazine of my own winchester was

> The passion of a man hunt conquers, as It always will until in the evolution of time the intexication of battle is outbred from human nature. I don't know how long we fired or how long the answering shots came from the shanty, but suddenly the door was flung inward, and a man stepped boldly ont.

An instant the ritles cooled. I saw Jack Brown's gaudy sombrere, its wide rim and massive crown glistening with silver ornaments. Black hair hanging to the shoulders, the leather "chaps" of a cowboy, and then-straight outward shet two arms, gleaming black eyes sighted two heavy colts, and at their report a ranger dropped his rifle because a bullet had shattered an arm. Then a velley.

The broad hat slipped downward over the Idack eyes straight up in the air two pistols to the ground in a henp sank the body. The rangers on guard at the rear ran toward the front when their ears told them the outlaw had braved his fate. We gathered around the fallen man, all honoring in our hearts the hopeless darlng of his death, and Captain Hall lifted the sombrero from his face.

"The devil!" he yelled. "Run to the rear, boys!" Too late! Idle to beat the bush. Useless a hasty hunt through the timber. Long afterward we knew that from the limb of an oak, around which a wild grapevine had woven its dense folinge, Jack Brown saw a sight which would have redeemed a being worth, in the broad economy of cternal time, the trouble of redemption. Love had faced that awful storm. Love had done its best to bring a waruing. Love laid down its life that a miserable and worse than worthless man might spring out of a door, plunge over an emlankment and hide in a tree. As tenderly as if her life had been all parity and her soul all untouched by sin we bore her body to the fort, and the next day, decently dressed in the garments of her sex, the body of Press was consigned to an unmarked grave on a barren hill not many yards from the spot where Brown used to beat her. And no larger funeral had been seen

mer girl: Don't wear white shoes. The publie is not accustomed to them yet, and it's very embarrassing to have everybody take a mental measurement of vour feet.

Don't say "I've seen 10,000,000 sailor hats and 20,000,000 blue Eton snits." That statement died oi old age last month.

Don't, when you visit the l'air, take a trunkful oi winter wraps with you. It is better to freeze to death in the evening, or even to eatch a line assortment of colds than to lose your best young man by making a picnie earry-all of him,

Don't be nuclearitable. If a girl's waist is soiled across the back that is no reason why you should jump at conclusions. The backs of the cablecar seats are often dusty,

Den't think that a girl holds to her hat for the sole purpose of displaying the pretty curves of her arm and shoulder. Sometimes she really loses her hat-pin. Don't propose wheeling another girl in one of the World's Fair rolling-chairs. You can not imagine how many pedestrians, camp-chairs, lampposts and Hygea-water stands you can run down until yon try it with a roll-

Don't be angry and say things at the waiters when you have to wait an tour or two for your luncheon in the down-town restaurants. Remember there are strangers within the city's gates, and that the foreign guests are dividing their administration almost equally between the World's Fair and the sailor-hatted, shirt-waisted and altogether charming American girl. So don't let them eatch you in a

What a Sweet Mammy!

When Fred Funston went on the Death valley expedition two or three years ago, two of his university girl friends were tulking about him. "Where and what is Death valley?" queried one. Why, it is away out west in the mountains, and is a horrid hot place where people just wither up into mummies," was the reply. "How perfectly awfull" responded her friend. More Money. HARPER'S WLEKTAL One of the sages of the People's Parly in Kansas some time ago delivered himself at a public meeting as follows: "If all the money that is in the banks were in the pockets of the people, the country would be better off." This good man was evidently maware of the feet that the money which is in the banks does not be long to the banks, but to people who deposited it there, and draw it out again when they please: that, meanwhile, this money is lent out by the banks to people who can give sufficient security; and that, when so lent out, it circulates among the people in the channels of business, and is. therefore, virtually in the pockets of the people. The sage had probably applied to a bank for a loan without offering sufficient security, and the loan being relused, he concluded that the money in the banks was malieiously withheld from the people What he really meant to say was, tha if the money which was in other peo ple's pockets were in his the would be letter off. O: which there is no doubt But this sage and his disciples will have to consider that there are but two horest ways of a tillagm riev--to i sell something for it, or to largow it. So long as you have things to sell Crushed and lumiliated he stood be- that other people want, such as corp. or dry goods, or your labor, you can always get money in exchange tor them It you have things of value to pledge, which the lender of teomey eonsiders sufficient scentity that he will get his money back, such as I aid, or wheat, or cotton, or good nailroad bonds, you can lorrow mency.
